TUESDAY EVENING, NOVEMBER 13.

AN UGLY KING.—One day a peasant woman took a basket of eggs to the house where the royal party was lodged. At the door she met an individual who greeted her politely, and on finding out her errand carried the basket to the kitchen, which done he returned with a handful of small coins. Emboldened by so much censure, the good woman mustered up courage to mention her great desire to set eyes on the king, Victor Emmanuel. "Why, that's me!" said the person with whom she was speaking. She looked at him scrutinizingly; then, after some seconds of mute contemplation, she exclaimed: "Oh, never! you won't let me to believe that. Such a sweet and beautiful woman as the queen would never have married a man so丑." The king (for it was he), dismissed her with an extra piece of money, and proceeded in all haste to ask some peasants what was the meaning of his burst. "So ugly!" was the reply. Victor Emmanuel related this small incident with the greatest gusto.

AN UNLUCKY FISHING PARTY.—A jolly party of gentlemen from the vicinity of West Chester, Pa., spent some time last summer on a fishing excursion to the Susquehanna river. A number of them contracted malarial fever, and two of them have died, the last victim being Jacob Lowry, of East Nantucket. Two others have been great sufferers from the same fever, but are now thought to be recovering.
